MARSHALL DEMANDS 4-YEAR PROGRAM

Truman Income Tax Cut Plan Getting GOP Cold Shoulder

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—President Truman's proposal for a $40 individual tax cut while increasing levies on corporation profits received the "cold shoulder" in congress today as Republican leaders pressed for enactment of their own program.

House and senate GOP chiefs joined in accusing the chief executive of engaging in politics in a presidential year.

Sen. Taft of Ohio, Republican presidential aspirant, announced he will answer Mr. Truman in a radio broadcast at 9:30 p. m. (EST) tonight.

Even among administration stalwarts there was on the whole an unusual lack of enthusiasm for much of the President's program as outlined in his state of the union message to a joint session of congress.

DEMOCRATIC members of the tax-writing house ways and means committee revealed that they were not consulted by the administration in formulation of Mr. Truman's tax proposals.

Rep. Doughton (D) N. C., the committee's ranking minority member, and Sen. George (D) Ga., his opposite on the senate finance committee, significantly declined to comment on the tax recommendations.

Rep. Knutson (R) Minn., announced that his ways and means committee will meet Jan. 16 to take up his bill for a cut of five billion 600 million dollars in individual income taxes. The Knutson plan embodies a $100 increase in individual exemptions, a percentage cut, family benefits and assistance to the aged and blind.

Knutson, commenting on Mr. Truman's tax program said "the President hasn't got any tax plan. It's just a plan to buy votes for $40 apiece."

Rep. Eberharter (D) Pa., a ways and means committee member, expressed confidence someone in his group will offer the President's program as a substitute for the GOP bill.

On new inflation controls, congress is expected to sit tight for a while until it sees how the "voluntary control" legislation approved by the special session works out. If prices continue to rise, some of the mandatory controls requested by the President may be granted.

THERE APPEARS only little likelihood that the Republican congress would act favorably before the scheduled June adjournment on the President's recommendations for universal military training, federal aid to the states for education, a national health program, expansion of the social security laws, farm price support and long-range housing legislation.

Congress appears certain to extend rent controls beyond the Feb. 29 expiration date. The outlook for admission of displaced persons appears more promising than at last year's session.

The Republican leadership may get behind a proposal to increase the minimum wage.

If so, it probably will support an increase in the hourly wage from 40 to 65 cents for workers engaged in interstate commerce, rather than the 75 cents recommended by the President.

The President's suggestion that Hawaii be admitted to the Union may be approved by the senate, the house having already acted favorably. No action is anticipated, however, on admitting Alaska.

New civil rights legislation, including such long-standing proposals as anti-lynching and anti-poll tax measures, as well as creation of a federal fair employment practices commission, appeared unlikely of enactment.

SURVIVORS OF THE CHARTERED DC-3, which crashed into a marsh eight miles east of Savannah, Ga., are brought ashore from Coast Guard boats for hospitalization at Savannah. Fifteen passengers and two crew members were killed in the crash, while remaining nine were injured. All but one aboard were Puerto Ricans.

This Plan Or None, Solons Told

U. S. Way Of Life Threatened, Claim

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Secretary of State George Marshall bluntly told congress today to promptly enact an adequate four-year European recovery program that "the way of life that we have known" hangs in the balance.

Opening the administration's fight for his plan to save Western Europe from economic collapse and Communist domination, Marshall heatedly remarked: "Either undertake to meet the requirements of the problem or don't undertake it at all."

The father of the Marshall Plan appeared as the first government witness before the senate foreign relations committee. He said:

"Our country is now faced with a momentous decision. If we decide that the United States is unable or unwilling effectively to aid in the reconstruction of Western Europe we must accept the consequences of its collapse into the dictatorship of police states."

MARSHALL declared that if Europe is left to its own resources, the vacuum which the war created will be filled by the forces of which wars are made, and "we shall in effect live in an armed camp, regulated and controlled."

In launching what promises to be one of the most heated issues of the last session of the GOP-controlled 80th congress, Marshall made the issue definitely one involving the United States' struggle with Russia.

He made it clear that he regards the plan crucial in his administration of foreign policy and the conflict between the Eastern and Western powers.

After outlining the deep underlying problems of a Europe war-torn and bleeding, Marshall declared that the problem is further complicated by policies of Moscow and the Communist parties throughout the world.

Marshall stood by the earlier announced decision not to set a figure for the four-year program but he insisted that it be authorized for the full term. He estimated the four-year cost at between 15 billion 100 million dollars and 17 billion 800 million dollars.

HE ADMITTED that some sacrifices must be made by the American people, but added that the "burden of the program diminishes rapidly after the first 15 months. Marshall told the committee:

"The six billion 800 million proposed for the first 15 months is less than a single month's charge of war. A world of continuing uneasy half peace will create demands for constantly mounting expenditures for defense. This program should be viewed as an investment in peace. In those terms the cost is low."

Other points made by Marshall were:

1. The program should be put (Continued on Page Two)

Oregon Floods Kill 4 Persons

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 8.—Floods which already have cost the lives of four persons began to subside today in the Upper Willamette and Rogue River valleys of Oregon.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lackey and a guest, Mrs. Ross Cooper, drowned when he tried to ford Olalla Creek, 20 miles west of Roseburg, on horseback.

At Eugene, the Willamette reached a crest of 15.75 feet, 3.7 above its banks, before beginning to fall.

The weather bureau said the crest will reach Portland Saturday morning and send the Willamette a foot over its banks. Workers began taking goods off the city's low-lying docks.

British Set For UN Talk On Palestine

Joint Plans To Be Aired

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Jan. 8.—The British government has advised United Nations Secretary-General Trygve Lie of its readiness to enter into close consultation with the five-power Palestine commission assembling here tomorrow.

One of the principal objectives of Britain is to lay joint plans with the UN group for systematic and coordinated procedure in the transferring of administrative power in the Holy Land and on preliminary partition steps.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, British representative at Lake Success, conveyed the desires of his government to Lie and requested the latter to suggest to the commission that an early invitation be extended to him to appear before it.

The five men who will hold the destiny of the Holy Land in their hands during the partition period are scheduled to meet as (Continued on Page Two)

30 Are Injured As Brazil Votes Out Communists

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 8.—Thirty persons were wounded here today when Communists and police clashed.

Shooting occurred when police crushed Communist resistance to the closing down of the newspaper Imprensa Popular, after President Eurico Dutra signed new anti-Communist legislation.

The newspaper, formerly known as the "Tribune Popular," is said to be a Communist party organ.

The order closing it followed the decision of the Brazilian legislature, in a 181 to 74 vote last night, to cancel the election mandates of Communist government officials. Rushed to President Dutra, it was signed immediately to hasten the enforcement of security measures.

The action deprives 17 Communist federal deputies of their posts. In addition, scores of Communist city councilmen and (Continued on Page Two)

Red Aide Denies Stalin Is Dead

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The counsellor of the Soviet embassy here denied categorically today an unconfirmed rumor reaching Reuters' British news agency from Switzerland that Joseph Stalin is dead.

The counsellor, Nicholas Pavlov, said: "There is absolutely nothing to rumors that Stalin is sick or dead."

Pavlov, well-known to European correspondents, formerly was the personal interpreter of Stalin and of Foreign Minister Molotov at the Kremlin.

The only source that had been given in the dispatch circulated by Reuters was an article said to have appeared in the Bern, Switzerland, newspaper Berner Tagwacht.

3-Cornered Gun Battles Raging In Jerusalem

JERUSALEM, Jan. 8.—A three-cornered gun battle raged in the center of Jerusalem today among Jews, Arabs and British soldiers.

The battle broke out after a new incident in which one Jew was killed and four others wounded when Arabs attacked a bus between Haifa and Tel Aviv.

It started when Arabs fired on the Jewish quarter in the old Montefiore district from position on the slopes of Mount Zion.

Jewish defense units immediately went into action. British sentries guarding the King David Hotel began sending volleys of Bren gun fire at both sides.

THE MONTFIORE quarter adjoins the Jaffa gate, which was bombed yesterday by men believed to be members of the Jewish underground.

The Arab attack today was thought to be a reprisal for the bombing. Ambulances rushed to the scene of the battle in the heart of Jerusalem.

Bombs were hurled intermittently from Jewish positions, apparently to discourage any attempt by snipers to storm the Jewish sector.

Earlier Arabs again attacked the Jewish Mekor Haim quarter of Jerusalem and touched off a new fierce battle in the continuing Palestine communal warfare.

Republicans Lukewarm Toward UMT

Issue Might Be 'Hot Potato'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—A lukewarm attitude on the part of Republican leaders makes any action on universal military training unlikely in this session of congress.

An influential GOP chief-tain in the house reported today that prospects for passage of the controversial legislation in an election year are dim.

He predicted the bill for compulsory military service for the nation's youth, urgently recommended by President Truman for enactment this year, may not reach the floor of either house.

Final decision on the measure by the house leadership is to be made soon as the result of a letter from Rep. Andrews (R) N. Y., house armed services committee chairman, urging the rules committee to take action.

ANDREWS' committee unanimously approved the measure last July by a 23-0 vote. He has now petitioned the powerful rules committee for a hearing required to bring the bill to the house floor.

The committee chairman's request for a hearing is expected to force the rules committee either to pigeonhole the legislation or schedule the bill for floor debate.

The GOP leadership spokesman observed that the pigeon-hole procedure probably will be decided upon on grounds that the bill might prove to be an election year "hot potato" and (Continued on Page Two)

Ex-Police Chief Is Indicted

XENIA, Jan. 8.—Former Yellow Springs Police Chief Oscar Day stood indicted today for embezzlement of municipal funds.

Day was charged last October with pocketing 233 dollars in the "manipulation" of traffic tickets through a double set of books. He was one of 20 persons indicted by the Greene County grand jury.

The jury also criticized the county's "antiquated penal facilities" and urged serious consideration be given the building of a new jail with separate juvenile detention quarters.

Famed Civil War Building Burns

CINCINNATI, Jan. 8.—The historic Central Turner hall in Cincinnati's "Over the Rhine" district was gutted by a fast-spreading fire early today.

No one was believed to have been in the building at the time the flames were discovered. Fire Marshal Dan Vogel said damage would run into the "thousands of dollars."

The building was preparing to observe its 100th anniversary this week. Union troops were housed in the historic hall during the Civil War.

Michael Said Pondering Asking UN Look At Case

LUSANNE, Jan. 8.—Young Ex-King Michael of Romania was reported today to be considering the advisability of placing before the United Nations the matter of his abdication, forced by the Communist-dominated Bucharest government.

The 26-year-old Michael, who feels definitely that he was robbed of his crown, meanwhile is pondering about how he will tell the world the facts concerning the abdication.

Michael spends considerable time gazing out at the snow-capped peaks of the Swiss Alps reviewing in his mind the maneuver of the Communists who ousted him against his will by threatening to have his loyal supporters imprisoned, and perhaps murdered.

Meanwhile, members of Michael's entourage revealed that he was given no advance warning by the government which they contend compelled him to abdicate.

AFTER HE returned to Bucharest from the London marriage of Princess Elizabeth and a brief sojourn in Switzerland, Michael went to Sinaia castle.

There, on the morning of Dec. 30, he received a telephone call from Premier Petru Groza, who told Michael his presence was required in Bucharest that afternoon on a matter of extreme urgency.

Accompanied by his secretary, Michael drove his own car to the Bucharest palace of Romanian Princess Elizabeth. There he (Continued on Page Two)

Kentucky Reports Seeing Saucers

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 8.—Kentucky state highway patrol headquarters had a new problem to consider today in the wake of yesterday's reports of a "flying saucer" being seen in Kentucky.

Headquarters was wondering what could be done with the darn thing if one of the state patrolmen caught it.

And from the reports that filtered in from outstate, all informally, several of the patrolmen saw the "saucer" or several of them, over Kentucky.

Three National Guard reserve planes—acting on orders of Godman Field commanding officer, Col. Guy F. Hix, at Fort Knox—eventually followed one of the objects.

Beyond the fact that lots of people reported seeing something, nothing seemed to jibe.

Col. Hix said he watched the "saucer" from the airfield's observation tower and it appeared motionless.

The pilots he sent after it reported it was traveling west at about 180 miles an hour.

State patrolmen at Madisonville said it appeared to be moving west at the rate of 10 miles an hour.

Col. Hix said it was very white and looked like an umbrella. He said it was about half the size of the ordinary saucer—the kind that goes under a coffee cup.

Again, there was a different story. A state patrolman said it looked like an ice cream cone with a little fire at the bottom and was about 45 feet across the top and 100 feet long.

From the number of calls received at the airfield from towns near Fort Knox, numerous people saw the object and wanted the planes to go after it and pull it down for a better look.

Dr. Walter L. Moore, in charge of the University of Louisville telescope, had a possible explanation.

The planet Venus was near the sun at the time the saucer reports were flying.

But he added, thoughtfully, it would take very exceptional atmospheric conditions to make the planet visible to the naked eye.

Airliner Declared 'Unsafe'

17 Die As Ship Takes Plunge

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 8.—Statements by two survivors of a DC-3 plane crash which killed 17 persons near here that the aircraft may have been "unsafe" spurred authorities today in their investigation of the disaster.

The plane, operated by Coastal Air Lines, dove into a marshland and burned yesterday with 24 passengers and two crewmen aboard. In addition to the dead, nine persons were injured, three critically.

All but one of the passengers were Puerto Ricans. Among them were six women and a small girl.

The survivors who expressed belief the plane was unsafe declared at Chandler hospital here last night that they tried to get their plane fares refunded before the trip.

ONE OF THEM, Octavia Pinol, 23, of San Juan, Puerto Rico, said the demand was made after passengers had seen the plane. He stated:

Ohio Now Getting Normal Weather

By International News Service Ohioans today were in the midst of weather doldrums that covered the entire country.

U. S. forecasters said the weather reports were similar to those recorded about the first of November.

"Nothing is in extremes the past few days," they said. "It seems we are having just enough cold, rain, sun and wind to make everything very normal for this time of year."

They added that the temperature ranges in Ohio so far this month have varied but little.

The mercury hovered near the freezing mark throughout the state today but observers predicted somewhat milder conditions in the afternoon and not so cold tonight.

Occasional rain is expected with rain or snow in the north portion followed by colder weather.

servation tower and it appeared motionless.

The pilots he sent after it reported it was traveling west at about 180 miles an hour.

State patrolmen at Madisonville said it appeared to moving west at the rate of 10 miles an hour.

Col. Hix said it was very white and looked like an umbrella. He said it was about half the size of the ordinary saucer—the kind that goes under a coffee cup.

Again, there was a different story. A state patrolman said it looked like an ice cream cone with a little fire at the bottom and was about 45 feet across the top and 100 feet long.

From the number of calls received at the airfield from towns near Fort Knox, numerous people saw the object and wanted the planes to go after it and pull it down for a better look.

Dr. Walter L. Moore, in charge of the University of Louisville telescope, had a possible explanation.

The planet Venus was near the sun at the time the saucer reports were flying.

But he added, thoughtfully, it would take very exceptional atmospheric conditions to make the planet visible to the naked eye.

LIE WILL briefly address the group and urge it to get down to business without delay.

In accordance with instructions from London, Cadogan already has urged him to convey the viewpoint that the group should "go slow" and study the task it will face.

The British government feels that any action might develop into a "danger" to the commission itself in addition to causing further friction.

Calls to appear before the commission undoubtedly will be sent to U. S. Representative Warren R. Austin, to Soviet Delegate Andrei Gromyko, to the Jewish agency and to the Arab representatives.

Moshe Shertok, head of the Jewish agency's political department, is coming to Lake Success to probe the commission's intentions on the enforcing of partition if Arab factions should oppose it by force.

Cadogan plans to elaborate on British measures for laying down the mandate and on the withdrawal of troops but for the moment will reiterate that the date for the former is May 15 and for the latter Aug. 1.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 8.—Twenty-one probated persons released in 1947, all members of the general neighborhood in which the body of Sheila Ann Tuley, 8, was found, were to be questioned today by members of the Cleveland homicide squad.

Detective David E. Kerr said the 21 were freed from the county jail last year because "there was no room for them there or at state hospitals."

Kerr has assigned homicide teams to check the whereabouts and activities of every person on the list during New Year's night when the eight-year-old girl was slain.

Alleged Burglar Shot By Police

AKRON, Jan. 8.—A police chase through local streets ended today in the death of Lester R. McHan.

McHan, 23, who was ordered to stop by police when he was seen crawling under an automobile, ran down one of the main streets and was shot when he failed to comply with the police order.

Six car owners reported a half hour later that their autos had been ransacked, probably by the dead man. A master automobile key, dropped by the bandit, was found by police during the chase.

IN THE SENATE, Luis Carlos Prestes, Federal senator from Rio and nominal head of the now outlawed Brazilian Communist party, will be ousted.

The Communist party in Brazil, largest and most active Communist group in the western hemisphere, was ordered abolished last May by action of the supreme court. Members of the Communist party since then have gone "underground."

A last-ditch fight was made by Communist deputies in the chamber. They attempted a filibuster during the stormy session which ended after the vote was taken last night.

At one point in the heated debate there was a threat of gun play.

Many deputies took an affront remarks made by Communist Deputy Mauricio Grabois at the end of his speech against the bill.

They surged toward him with drawn revolvers. Other deputies and guards intervened to avert any incident.

Small Business Protection Asked

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Industrialist Henry J. Kaiser urged the steel industry today to create an impartial steel anti-inflation commission to protect small and new manufacturers from being "starved to death for lack of steel" and to prevent gray market operations.

Kaiser advocated "goldfish bowl" hearings by the commission on any proposed allocations of steel which he said "have the danger of crushing the little fellows in new enterprises."

He suggested that members of the industry enter a voluntary agreement to distribute their products fairly among all customers at reasonable prices "with due regard for the needs of small business."

Sale Petition Is Received

Sale of real estate owned by the late Ora B. LaRue was sought Wednesday in Pickaway County probate court upon demand of the beneficiaries. The petition was signed by Luther M. and John P. LaRue, estate executors.

The property involves two tracts of land. One is a house and lot in Circleville with estimated value set at $8,500. The other is 22 1/4 acres of land in Walnut township. One half of this interest was appraised at $5,000, but appraisal on the second half has not been made.

Inlaw Is Sued For Accounting

GLADYS T. CUMMINS has filed suit in Pickaway County common pleas court against Sidney Cummins, her father-in-law, for an accounting of $1,500 with interest as rent on property which was conveyed to her in Harrison township.

She claims at the time the house and lots were transferred into her possession the property had been let to Charles J. Pierce for a period of three years at the rate of $900 per year. Mrs. Cummins claims her father-in-law has not given an accounting of all the rent.

ONE MINUTE PULPIT

I have blotted out as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and, as a cloud, thy sins; return unto me; for I have redeemed thee. —Isa. 44:22.

Mrs. Elbia Henkle and son were removed from Berger hospital Wednesday to their home on Route 1, Lockbourne.

Mrs. Henry Justice, Harrisburg, Ohio, was admitted as a medical patient to Berger hospital Wednesday.

Mrs. Geneva Martin, in Berger hospital for a tonsillectomy, was returned to her home at 102 Eureka avenue Wednesday.

In a report Tuesday on the Pickaway County commissioners' meeting, an error was made by listing Mrs. Dorothy Gerhardt as an assistant relief director. She is a clerk in the relief department and is working under a civil service provisional appointment.

Eliot Henry, Circleville, who is a medical patient in St. Francis hospital, Columbus, remains in a critical condition.

William M. Reid was reported improving in Berger hospital and soon will be removed to his home, East Union street.

Joseph Torok of Youngstown, Democratic candidate for governor, spent Wednesday in Circleville.

MOSCOW, Jan. 8.—The Moscow News declared today that "all friends of peace welcome Henry Wallace's political platform."

The article, giving the first Soviet comment on Wallace's decision to head a third party in the U. S. presidential campaign, said that "the people of the United States are paying more and more heed to the voice of Henry Wallace, who has condemned the schemes of Wall Street."

The Moscow News is a weekly political newspaper published in English.

Richard Tauber Dies In London

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Richard Tauber, actor and singer of operatic renown, died today in a London hospital.

Tauber, 54, underwent an operation two months ago. The Austrian-born tenor was well-known to Americans through his appearances at the Metropolitan Opera.

Among the lead roles he played in opera were the parts of Rudolf, in "La Boheme," Pinkerton, in "Madame Butterfly," Don Jose, in "Carmen," and Faust in the opera of that name.

Couple Held In County Jail

A New Holland couple is in Pickaway County jail awaiting hearing in probate court for contributing to the delinquency of two minor children.

The pair was arrested early Wednesday by county authorities in the woman's bedroom, Sheriff Charles Radcliff said.

She is married and the mother of two children while he is single. Her husband is jailed under $1,000 bond and awaits grand jury action for grand larceny.

because of the cost of the UMT program.

He pointed out that while the American Legion has sent petitions in favor of UMT bearing a million signatures, numerous other groups have just as strenuously opposed adoption of the conscription program. He commented:

"A good many members feel there's nothing to be gained by voting either way."

The cost of the program which would require a year of training for all youths between 18 and 20 years of age is estimated at one billion 750 million dollars annually.

About 850,000 men would be trained for military service each year. The training would consist of six months of basic training in camps or on ship-board and an additional six months of training or its equivalent in the ROTC, National Guard or similar organizations.

County School Office Budget Hiked $1,000

Pickaway County board of education, Wednesday appropriated $9,500 for expenditures in the coming year.

This year's appropriation is about $1,000 more than the 1947 total. There was a balance of $40.47.

The appropriation is to pay salaries of four county school employees, furnish office equipment and supplies, purchase report cards, diplomas, paper, and state tests.

RECEIVING salaries from the money are Superintendent of schools, George McDowell, Joseph Clarridge, county attendance officer; Dorothy Glick, superintendent's secretary; and Doris Spangler, a part-time secretary.

The board approved a study of comprehensive surveys on alcoholism. A booklet titled "Quiz Book," sponsored by the Anti-Saloon League is to be the text for study. It contains results of research on the causes and effects of alcohol on the human body and nervous system, and gives data on experiments conducted in the laboratories of various colleges.

Along with this new course, which may be taught in civics and hygiene classes, is a contest through which one boy and one girl in the county will be offered a week's vacation at some famous or historical place. This trip will be offered at the end of six weeks of the alcohol course. Winners will be determined by examinations.

3. American assistance must be afforded on terms which do not violate the sovereignty of the European nations, each with a "long and proud history."

4. A substantial part of the funds made available for the program should be used for purchases outside the United States.

5. The organization to administer the program should have the utmost flexibility in operation in order to take advantage of favorable developments, to meet emergencies and to cushion the impact on domestic economy. The administration should be subordinate to the secretary of state and not empowered to shape a second foreign policy.

The cost of the program which would require a year of training for all youths between 18 and 20 years of age is estimated at one billion 750 million dollars annually.

About 850,000 men would be trained for military service each year. The training would consist of six months of basic training in camps or on ship-board and an additional six months of training or its equivalent in the ROTC National Guard or similar organizations.

County School Office Budget Hiked $1,000

Pickaway County board of education, Wednesday appropriated $9,500 for expenditures in the coming year.

This year's appropriation is about $1,000 more than the 1947 total. There was a balance of $40.47.

The appropriation is to pay salaries of four county school employees, furnish office equipment and supplies, purchase report cards, diplomas, paper, and state tests.

RECEIVING salaries from the money are Superintendent of schools, George McDowell, Joseph Clarridge, county attendance officer; Dorothy Glick, superintendent's secretary; and Doris Spangler, a part-time secretary.

The board approved a study of comprehensive surveys on alcoholism. A booklet titled "Quiz Book," sponsored by the Anti-Saloon League is to be the text for study. It contains results of research on the causes and effects of alcohol on the human body and nervous system, and gives data on experiments conducted in the laboratories of various colleges.

Along with this new course, which may be taught in civics and hygiene classes, is a contest through which one boy and one girl in the county will be offered a week's vacation at some famous or historical place. This trip will be offered at the end of six weeks of the alcohol course. Winners will be determined by examinations.

Weather conditions were reported to have been good at the time of the crash yesterday morning.

Brother Held In Forgery Case

Russell Leach, 20, Circleville, is being held in Pickaway County jail pending an investigation by Sheriff Charles Radcliff.

Although no formal charges have been filed, the sheriff's office believes Leach collaborated with his brother Joseph, 25, in passing two bad checks for $35 at a local garage and at a filling station in December.

Joseph Leach is under $1,000 bond in the county jail awaiting grand jury action for forgery.

3. American assistance must be afforded on terms which do not violate the sovereignty of the European nations, each with a "long and proud history."

4. A substantial part of the funds made available for the program should be used for purchases outside the United States.

5. The organization to administer the program should have the utmost flexibility in operation in order to take advantage of favorable developments, to meet emergencies and to cushion the impact on domestic economy. The administration should be subordinate to the secretary of state and not empowered to shape a second foreign policy.

Taft Plans No Fulltime Campaign

To Take Stump Only At Recess

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8 — Sen. Robert A. Taft, now officially Ohio's favorite son for the Republican presidential nomination, will rely on his congressional record to further his presidential aspirations.

Congressman Clarence J. Brown, Blanchester publisher and Taft's pre-convention campaign manager, said Taft would go on speaking jaunts only during congressional recesses.

Following Taft's unanimous selection as favorite son by the GOP state committee which listed State Treasurer Don H. Ebricht as second choice, Brown asserted:

"The senator intends to devote his full time, except during recesses, to his congressional duties."

"If he does as well in this session of congress as he did in the last, he may be nominated on the first or second ballot."

THE 53-MEMBER delegation Ohio will send to the national convention in Philadelphia will be headed by Taft's senatorial colleague, John W. Bricker. Ohio gets a three-vote bonus because the state went Republican in the last presidential election.

Brown said he did not know definitely if Harold Stassen, also an avowed candidate for the GOP nomination, would enter the Ohio primary, but added, "I frankly do not believe that he will."

The campaign manager also ducked questions as to Taft's possible entry into other state primaries, but recalled that Taft, in announcing his candidacy some time ago, declared that he would not have time for campaigning in other states.

No figures as to the number of delegates Taft would have on the first ballot at Philadelphia were given by Brown on the ground that "it would be unfair to other candidates."

The state committee picked eight other delegates-at-large besides Bricker and nine alternates, but agreed to leave the selection of the 44 district delegates to the local congressional district organizations.

Delegates-at-large other than Bricker are to be Governor Herbert; Republican State Chairman Fred H. Johnson of Zanesville; Brown; National Committeewoman Katharine Kennedy Brown of Dayton; Congresswoman Frances P. Bolton of Cleveland; Former State Chairman Ed D. Schorr of Cincinnati; Former Gov. Myers Y. Cooper of Cincinnati; and Charles Jones of Jackson, president of the Ohio League of Young Republican Clubs.

ALTERNATES are to be State Sen. Kyle Brooks of Cincinnati; Assistant Attorney General Albertus B. Conn of Toledo; Miss Jane E. Hunter of Cleveland; Henry L. Thompson, Jr., of Perrysburg; Former National American Legion Commander Milo J. Warner of Toledo; Walter E. Sollars of Washington C. H.; Miles E. Evans of Cleveland; T. Lamar Jackson of Youngstown; and Ralph Shellhouse of Dayton.

Red Cross Disaster Specialist To Confer With Local Chapter

Miss Marjorie G. Howard, disaster field representative of the American Red Cross, will be in Circleville Friday to consult with the local chapter.

Purpose of the national executive's visit is to assist in outlining of the Pickaway chapter's disaster program, according to Mrs. Harold M. Bainbridge, executive secretary of the local unit.

Miss Howard will meet with Robert P. Wallace, newly appointed local disaster chairman and other local officials and service chairmen.

Miss Howard, former practicing attorney of Miami, Fla., entered Red Cross service in 1944 as a field representative of disaster service in the eastern area and served in that capacity until 1945 when she was appointed administrative assistant to the director of disaster service.

For nine years preceding her appointment to the Red Cross staff, Miss Howard had been employed by the Florida state welfare board. At the time of her appointment she was di-

Born in San Francisco, Miss Howard received most of her education in Florida. She has degrees from the University of Miami and from Florida State College for Women. She also studied social welfare at the University of Chicago.

Ax Slayer Tells Of 23 Deaths

WALLA WALLA, Wash., Jan. 8—Ax Slayer Jake Bird calmly sat in his Washington state prison cell today and continued to clear up nationwide murders which have baffled police for nearly 20 years.

The murderer of a Tacoma mother and daughter has not only confessed killing 13 persons, but said he may be able to clear up 10 other unsolved slayings.

Washington Prison Warden Tom Smith said:

"Bird has not admitted committing 40 more murders. He only says he may be able to shed some light on the killings."

Unless Gov. Mon C. Wallgren orders a stay of execution, Bird will be hanged Jan. 16.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8—Planting the right seeds at the right times will help Ohio farmers to raise the larger crops required in 1948 to supply the needs of this country and abroad, according to Dr. David F. Beard, extension agronomist at Ohio State university.

Helping toward that end is this new adaptation map and chart compiled by the Ohio agricultural experiment station and the Ohio State university agricultural extension service.

Each Ohio farmer can tell quickly the best seed varieties for his part of the state. Recommendations are based on extensive tests by Ohio's agricultural specialists and by farmers in the field.

To guide farmers in the proper selections of best adapted corn varieties, the state has been divided into seven areas, as shown by the drawing. The best available hybrid corn, oats, soybeans, clover and winter wheat are indicated for the various sections for planting in 1948.

THE TERMS "short season," "mid-season" and "full-season" as applied to good corn land in an average season are used to indicate the time required for any hybrid to reach maturity in the particular area with due recognition to the influences of soil productivity, seasonal conditions, and management activities.

Relative maturity of various Ohio hybrids is shown by the letters M, K, W, C and L, the "M" hybrids requiring least time to mature with the others progressively later at intervals of about three days between each letter group.

"Full season" seed requires early planting, and "short season" seed should be used to insure a mature crop from late plantings.

For winter wheat, the varieties Butler, Thorne, Trumbull, and Fulhio are good for all areas except the extreme southwest where Thorne is not recommended.

Kentucky No. 1 and Ohio No. 1 are recommended varieties of winter barley for all seven areas. In the case of oats, Clinton and Wayne are approved for all areas except the southern section. There Columbia and Clinton are advised.

For soybeans, the recommended varieties to precede winter wheat are Earlyana in the extreme northeast, Earlyana and Richland in most other portions. Richland alone is suggested in the southern part, and Richland and Lincoln in the extreme southwest. For the full season, the recommended soybeans are Richland in the northeast and Lincoln for all the rest of the state.

ALTHOUGH Hawkeye soybeans and Ajax oats have been added to the recommended list, seed of these will not be generally available for 1948 plantings, and they have therefore been omitted from the table below.

Recommendations on red clover are Van Fossen and Midland for the northern half with the addition of Cumberland in the central section. In the southern part, Cumberland and Kentucky 215 are advised. In the case of timothy, the Lorain variety gets approval for central and northern Ohio, and Marietta in the southern part.

The recommendations for seed corn show considerably more variation according to section and season, and these are given in detail in the chart.

In view of the limited supply of best adapted hybrids, Dr. Beard points out the possibilities of planting an extra acre with each bushel of seed through the use of smaller seed. "Drilled or checked, the smaller sizes of Ohio Certified hybrid seed will plant evenly with the proper planter plates. This means that the farmer can plant an average of eight to ten acres per bushel with small seed, as compared to seven or eight acres with larger sizes, and secure the same yield," the Ohio State agronomist says.

LISTS OF GROWERS of Ohio Certified seeds of all the recommended varieties are available through county agricultural extension agents.

Using the map shown, Pickaway County growers can de-

Jaycee Service Award Set

Outstanding Man To Be Honored

In line with similar presentations to be made by Junior Chambers of Commerce throughout the nation, the Circleville Jaycee unit will present a Distinguished Service Award key to Circleville's outstanding young man at its Founder's Day banquet, according to an announcement by Ralph L. Amey, Secretary of the local organization.

Tentative plans schedule the banquet for next Tuesday evening at the Pickaway country club. Identity of the recipient of the annual award will not be made public until that time.

Selection will be limited to a young man of the city between the ages of 21 and 35. Five judges, all over 35 and not identified, will make the selection.

Last year, James Yost, local hardware dealer, received the award as the outstanding young man of Circleville in 1946. The 1945 award went to Hal Dean, now with Ralston-Purina in St. Louis. In 1944, the award went to Norbert L. Cochran, an official of Container Corp.

THE AWARD is to be presented after approval of the committee's nominee by the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce who affords the recognition through the local organization.

The award is given to the young man the judges believe has contributed most to the welfare of this community in the past 12 months. The winner need not be a member of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, Amey made clear.

At the same time as Circleville's outstanding young man is honored here by the local Jaycees, 1,550 other young men will be recognized in similar banquet ceremonies by Junior Chambers all over America.

Meantime, in Chattanooga, the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce will be saluting the group of great Americans selected as the most outstanding young men of the nation. The awards in Chattanooga will be made by John Ben Sheppard, President of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce. The program will be broadcasted over a nation-wide radio network.

Ashville

Ashville Band Boosters Club will sponsor a benefit basketball game Jan. 16 in the local gym between the undefeated Pettibone Plumbers and the Reynoldsburg independent team. Arrangements are being made for a preliminary game. All proceeds will be given to the fund for purchasing band uniforms. Following the games, the local school will offer at public auction a combination power table saw, joiner, band saw and shaper; a drill press and mortising equipment; and a 1/2 h. p. motor. It is also planned to hold an auction of baked goods and other articles for the benefit of the band fund. Everyone is urged to attend. Band members will hold an advance ticket sale. On Jan. 17 Ashville high will play McArthur on the local floor in a second benefit game in which the athletic association is giving all proceeds to the band fund.

Soil Aid Plan Given Good Year

Survey Made On Conservation

Seventy-seven percent of limestone and nearly 100 percent of the fertilizer scheduled for application on farms in the Pickaway County soil conservation district actually were used in 1947, J. A. Muster, local soil conservationist, said Thursday.

He reported that a December survey showed several farmers had lime coming from the AAA and due Dec. 31. Hence, it is possible that about 90 percent of that lime reached the land, Muster observed.

In the case of pastures improvement, the showing was much less favorable. Only 64 percent of the lime and 58 percent of the fertilizer to have been used on pastures, actually was applied.

"The lack of appreciation of the economy of pasture made livestock gains on one hand and a lack of realization that pasture crops draw from the soils plant foods, the same as do other crops, probably accounts largely for the lack of planned pasture treatments," Muster said.

THE LACK of soil saving practices, such as contour planting and sod waterways to carry runoff water, was brought out in the survey.

Only 40 percent of the sloping land that erodes was contour farmed and only 70 percent of the sod waterways were graded in, fertilized and seeded. Surprisingly, Muster stated, more tile drainage was installed than was originally planned.

In a recent letter to community committee, John Boggs, chairman of the Production and Marketing Administration, advised fieldmen to suggest to farmers that the latter apply to the Soil Conservation Service for aid in planning the most effective use of the benefits afforded by the AAA.

Boggs contends that "the AAA provides the wherewithal while the SCS provides the know-how, and that the use of a combination of the two services will add the maximum to the farmers' incomes and the country's welfare."

Nations Praised For Food Plan

CHICAGO, Jan. 8—The willingness of nations to co-operate with the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization despite their disagreements on UN matters in general brought praise from a FAO delegate in Chicago.

Homer L. Brinkley of Lake Charles, La., the U. S. delegate, told the National Council of Farmer Co-operatives last night that this spirit of co-operation and unselfishness was "one bright spot" in the general world outlook.

Brinkley said that FAO recommendations generally are "the result of clear and careful thinking and planning, rather than of national issues of a selfish nature."

Youth's Story Revealed Hoax

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8—Good-hearted local policemen were quite upset when a bright 10-year old giving his name as Toney Angelo walked into the chief's office, saying he had been stranded in the town 10 days ago and wanted help to get home.

The boy said he was hitchhiking to New Philadelphia and was let off in Columbus by mistake; that he roamed the streets by night and the stores by day, living on popcorn and candy bought with the occasional coins he found on the floors.

The goodhearted policemen calmed down when they learned their guest had disappeared from a Columbus orphanage yesterday afternoon.

Russian Ship Believed Safe

TOKYO, Jan. 8—The Russian Ship Dvina, in distress off Northern Japan with 800 passengers aboard, was reported late today to have righted herself partially from a dangerous list that momentarily threatened to overturn the crowded vessel.

U. S. Navy authorities in Tokyo received messages from rescue ships and planes at the scene, stating that the Soviet vessel now was listing only 30 degrees.

A few hours earlier, the ship had developed a list of more than 45 degrees and was in imminent danger of turning over in storm-tossed seas.

Deputy Stunned As Radio Calls For 'Brother'

Deputy Sheriff Carl Radcliff had a confusing moment Wednesday in the sheriff's office when a police radio call announced they were holding in custody one Charles Radcliff.

Carl, brother of Sheriff Charles Radcliff, breathed a sigh of relief. "Never a dull moment in this office."

Jaycee Service Award Set

Outstanding Man To Be Honored

In line with similar presentations to be made by Junior Chambers of Commerce throughout the nation, the Circleville Jaycee unit will present a Distinguished Service Award key to Circleville's outstanding young man at its Founder's Day banquet, according to an announcement by Ralph L. Amey, Secretary of the local organization.

Tentative plans schedule the banquet for next Tuesday evening at the Pickaway country club. Identity of the recipient of the annual award will not be made public until that time.

Selection will be limited to a young man of the city between the ages of 21 and 35. Five judges, all over 35 and not identified, will make the selection.

Last year, James Yost, local hardware dealer, received the award as the outstanding young man of Circleville in 1946. The 1945 award went to Hal Dean, now with Ralston-Purina in St. Louis. In 1944, the award went to Norbert L. Cochran, an official of Container Corp.

THE AWARD is to be presented after approval of the committee's nominee by the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce who affords the recognition through the local organization.

The award is given to the young man the judges believe has contributed most to the welfare of this community in the past 12 months. The winner need not be a member of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, Amey made clear.

At the same time as Circleville's outstanding young man is honored here by the local Jaycees, 1,550 other young men will be recognized in similar banquet ceremonies by Junior Chambers all over America.

Meantime, in Chattanooga, the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce will be saluting the group of great Americans selected as the most outstanding young men of the nation. The awards in Chattanooga will be made by John Ben Shepherd, President of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce. The program will be broadcast over a nation-wide radio network.

It is also planned to hold an auction of baked goods and other articles for the benefit of the band fund. Everyone is urged to attend. Band members will hold an advance ticket sale. WITHOUT HISTORY

THE OLD saying, "A happy country has no history", applies equally well to happy families, which seldom if ever make newspaper headlines or even feature stories. Broken homes and their by-products are the stuff of which stories are made.

Recently, however, the Chicago Daily News has been running a series of illustrated feature stories concerning happy families in the Chicago area. This refreshing innovation pictures families consisting of from one to twelve children, and sometimes one or two grandparents. One example showed a young couple who had added the wife's mother to their menage with no accompanying disharmony. The mother, when interviewed, showed admiration and affection for her son-in-law, and the latter was appreciative of his mother-in-law's help around the house and of her co-operative attitude.

One attribute in common among the large families of children was a sense of responsibility and a protective attitude of older children toward the younger and smaller ones. On the whole, these happy families are united as groups, and held together by strong bonds of loyalty and affection. Most have church affiliations, and nearly all have so much fun at home together that harmful outside amusements have no drawing power.

These families, whose heads are often active in PTA work and in service clubs, are an active force for good in their home communities. They far outnumber the headline makers.

BRITONS MOVING

A DISPATCH from London says that 500,000 citizens of Great Britain are waiting for planes and ships to take them overseas. Canada, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, the East Indies, and the new colonies under development in East Africa are given as their destinations.

It takes courage to pick up stakes and start life anew in a strange country. Climate, social conditions, economic conditions, all challenge the old habits and customs. But apparently it takes more courage than many Britons have to stay put and suffer the monotony and drabness which have accompanied their daily living for the past few years. If the immediate future promised anything better, they might be able to bear it. But with more austerity the only prospect, any change looks like a good break.

These exiles will have a great deal to contribute to the colonies whose populations they will augment. Climatic and other differences will also work differences in the immigrants. The whole process will be interesting to observe.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

The Damon Runyon committee, which has been raising funds to fight cancer and has done it remarkably well, held a contest for a definition of Communism as part of its program. They must have received some extraordinarily interesting definitions, most of which are undoubtedly confused but give an index to American thinking on the subject.

The prize-winning reply is as follows: "A Communist is one who would like to divide everything, particularly these United States."

This may be facetious but it is wholly incorrect. The Communists do not wish to divide wealth; they seek to concentrate it. They do not believe in dividing up the United States; they do believe in taking over the whole United States and even the entire world, fitting all countries into their Soviet system and controlling all of mankind from a single world headquarters in Russia.

In a word, their concern is not with division or subtraction but solely with addition.

Under the capitalist system, wealth is individually held, more or less, according to earnings, savings, investment and inheritance. The individual's wealth may increase by profits or interest or rents, or it may decrease by losses. The means of production and distribution is privately held and operated. Fearful of monopolies, the government regulates these private holdings with the object of maintaining competition, avoiding concentration of wealth and power. The redistribution of wealth is further accomplished by inheritance and income taxes and, to some extent, by public spending.

Capitalism is then a system in which the results of productivity are divided, a great many individuals receiving a share either directly through wages, salaries, interest or indirectly through the distribution of the proceeds of taxes. When the division is slow, steps are taken to speed it up, the object being to avoid concentration.

Capitalist criticism of the New Deal was based, to no small degree, upon objections to its tendency to concentrate the ownership of wealth in the hands of the government through the RFC and some 50 government corporations, including such an agency as TVA. Whether such criticism was correct or not is not pertinent to this particular discussion; it is mentioned here to indicate that concentration of wealth by government is abhorrent to capitalism.

Under Communism, the government owns and operates the means of production and distribution. Although wages of a varying scale are paid, profits and losses can be earned only by the government. All productive and distributive agencies are government monopolies. In fact, Communism is a monopolistic system which tolerates no division of the fruits of production except as the state, which owns everything, temporarily permits to serve its own purposes.

That is why the Damon Runyon prizewinner, as so many others, is in error. Such persons have somehow gained the impression that Communists wish to divide up privately-owned wealth. They want no such thing. They wish to take away privately-owned wealth, to abolish it, to make it part of the state as a school or a park or a garbage incinerator is part of the state.

LAFF-A-DAY

"She says it's a trifle big for her."

DIET AND HEALTH

A Painful Baby Disorder

By HERMAN N. RUNDSEN, M.D.

THE child who suffers from the condition known as intussusception becomes suddenly, seriously, and dramatically sick. Even though, as a rule, he is too young to describe his pain, his mother will notice that never before in his life has he cried so hard.

Intussusception usually develops in well-nourished and healthy babies between the ages of four and ten months. In this disorder there is a sort of telescoping of the bowel, which seems to take place most often when the child is being changed from a liquid to a solid diet. Thus, this may be one of the causes of the condition, though it may also develop as an apparent aftermath to a bowel infection.

Attacks of Pain

The symptoms of intussusception consist of attacks of colicky pain, vomiting, and the presence of blood in the bowel movements. About three-fourths of the children who develop intussusception usually have all of these symptoms, and all of those with the condition have at least one of them.

If, when these symptoms are present, a lump or mass can be felt in the abdomen, a diagnosis of intussusception is certain. Often, the lump may also be felt through the rectum.

Severe Symptoms

As I indicated earlier, even the first symptoms are severe enough to show that the child is seriously ill. The condition starts suddenly either with vomiting or an attack of sharp, colicky pain which may last only a few seconds but which returns at 10- to 30-minute intervals.

Between attacks, the baby may appear well, but when the pain comes on again he grows pale, draws up his legs, and cries violently. His pulse will be rapid and he may develop fever. As the condition progresses, and the blocking of the opening through the bowel is more complete, the child is pale, sweaty, and may often go into shock or collapse.

In making a diagnosis, it may be necessary to give the child an anesthetic or drug to put him to sleep. This will relax the muscles of the abdomen so that an examination may be carried out more easily.

If such a procedure is employed, preparations should be made so that, if necessary, an operation can be performed under the same anesthetic. X-ray of the bowel will also help in the diagnosis. The treatment to relieve the condition is, in practically all instances, operation.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS M. A.: I seem to have a sensation of pins and needles in my legs. What could cause this trouble?

Answer: The condition you describe may be due to such things as disturbance of the circulation, trouble of the nervous system, or disorder of the lower part of the spine. Pressure, such as from a tumor within the lower part of the abdomen, might be responsible. Hence, a thorough study by a physician would have to be carried out before proper treatment could be suggested.

SYNOPSIS

Catherine Lister is engaged to Nicky Bray, recently discharged from an army hospital, but is disturbed by the secret knowledge that she still loves Stephen Darrell. Her romance with Stephen had ended abruptly two years before when she had surprised him with her cousin, Hat La Mot, at his cottage located near her Aunt Angela Wardwell's country estate. The sudden death of Angela's husband, John, had occurred shortly after. Catherine still cherished her uncle's silver leopard desk ornament which had been his Christmas gift to her that year. At the Wardwell town house, Angela announced her coming marriage to Mike Nye, who had long been a friend of the family. Catherine noted the steely silence with which Hat and her brother Tom, and his wife, Francine, at first greeted the news.

CHAPTER SEVEN

MIKE said he had come back to New York on business, was going on to Washington tomorrow. He insisted on their all lunching with him, wouldn't take no.

Hat and Angela had gone upstairs and Catherine was standing at one of the windows listening to Mike talk about New Mexico to Tom and Francine and looking idly down into the street when her glance sharpened.

There he was, almost as he had been when she last saw him, like a forgotten figure on a stage set, the small, shabbily smart, gray-haired man into whom she had bumped late yesterday afternoon. He was leaning against an iron railing across the street, hat brim low over his eyes, one shoulder higher than the other, hands in the pockets of the brown checkered, gazing at nothing, at a car going past, at—the facade of the Wardwell house?

It could be. If so, it was decidedly queer. Catherine frowned. She was about to call the attention of the others to the small man across the street when, behind her, Hat said, "I can't, Mike. I'd love to go with you, but I'm meeting Steve Darrell at Finlay's at one."

Mike said shortly, "Steve Darrell? Oh, too bad." Angela intervened. "That's all right, Hat, we'll go to Finlay's too, and you and Stephen can join us."

Catherine forgot about the little man across the street. She didn't want to meet Stephen Darrell again, didn't want to talk to him or be near him. To back out now would look suspicious. Pride stiffened her spine. She turned, refused Mike's exploring glance, picked up her gloves and purse and went with the others out of the room and down the stairs.

Stephen Darrell was waiting for Hat in the restaurant, smoking a cigarette and sipping a martini in the little rose-lit mirror-lined lounge bar. Her apprehension as to how Mike would treat him was stifled. They saluted each other with cool pleasantness. Catherine didn't say anything to Stephen but hello. It wasn't necessary. He remained behind with Hat when they went to the table Mike immediately procured. When the two of them came in five minutes later, it was evident that they had been quarreling. Hat's eyes were narrowed and her eyebrows were brushed expertly with mascara, and she kept biting her lower lip, and Stephen Darrell wore a remote look, as though he were somewhere else.

Francine, who never missed anything, murmured to Catherine, with interest, "Now, what's up?" and Angela, always observant, glanced at Hat anxiously. But she was too good a hostess to let anything interfere with a social occasion.

Flowers, fragile glassware, the soft crash of voices surrounding their own, the cocktails were warming, the food was excellent, the luncheon was not a success. Angela worked hard but unavailingly. What conversation there was, was forced. There were long pauses and the air of constraint steadily grew.

Catherine thought the meal would never end. It was an endurance test. Hat and Stephen Darrell—was there a definite understanding between them? No matter, Nicky and herself. They were going riding in the Park later; she was to pick Nicky up at his hotel at three. It was twenty of three and coffee had been served when the axe descended, crashingly.

The blow was utterly unexpected. It was more than that, it was confounding. Tom and Stephen were exchanging reminiscences, talking of men they had known and what had happened to them in the war, when Tom said, twirling the stem of his liquor glass, "... and Blanchard. You remember Sandy Blanchard? Poor old Sandy. He got his in a train wreck in the South last week, after going safely through that madhouse. Queer, isn't it? I got a notice of a memorial service for him this morning."

Catherine's cup was halfway to her lips. She made herself raise it, sipped once, twice, put the cup down. Blanchard was dead, Nicky couldn't have been going to meet him last night. He had lied to her. And Stephen Darrell knew it. He must have been laughing up his sleeve at her histrionics of the evening before. She didn't look toward him. She sat on, enclosed in a fog of humiliation and pain.

Five minutes later, skipping her good-byes, "I've got to fly. I'm meeting Nicky and I'm late now," she was on her way to the door. Mike called something after her as she went, but she didn't turn. She got a cab and drove straight to Nicky's hotel, the Wardwell, on East Fifty-second Street. Nicky wasn't in. In spite of the fact that they had a definite engagement made a week in advance, his room didn't answer and he hadn't left any message.

Her anger at white heat, she started home in another cab. Nicky had a key and might be at her apartment. He didn't know she had gone to see Angela. Halfway downtown she changed her mind. She had to talk to him, had to find out why he had deliberately deceived her the night before, but not now, she thought, not like this, not until she was calmer, more rational.

Her watch had stopped. She set it with shaking fingers by a clock on a station and got out at Union Square. The afternoon had turned soft, golden, and the benches in the little park were crowded. What she craved was space, and the sky and room in which to think. On Fourteenth Street she swung east toward the river and the drive.

Two hours of fast walking followed by a sandwich and a cup of coffee in a cafeteria did her an enormous amount of good and reduced things to their proper proportions. When she fitted the key into the lock of her door at around half past six her anger had long since faded. She knew that there was, there had to be, a reason for Nicky's evasion of the night before. Simply because she couldn't imagine what it was didn't mean that it didn't exist.

She had hoped to find Nicky waiting for her. The darkness when she opened the door was a disappointment. Nicky wasn't there. But he had been there. The little prayer rug in the hall was scuffed and the small maple rocker at the foot of the couch that people were continually bumping into, faced the kitchen instead of the window.

But there was no note on the table beside her chair. It was seven o'clock. Troubled, Catherine called the Wardwell. She called again at eight, without result. By that time, she was beginning to be seriously worried. Had something happened to Nicky? Had he blacked out somewhere? Was he ill, in a hospital? With his fracture, a blackout was always a possibility. When the phone finally rang at shortly after nine, she sprang for it. It wasn't Nicky; it was Mike Nye, and Mike wanted to see her.

"Can you come up here to my place, Catherine?" Mike asked. "I'd come to you only that I'm waiting for a long-distance call." "Now?" she said. "Oh, Mike, I can't. I'm expecting Nicky."

"Nicky...?" There was a pause at the other end of the wire. Then Mike said, "I've got to see you tonight, Catherine. Don't ask me why, I'll tell you when you get here."

There was a note of urgency in his voice and it was sharper than usual. Catherine was mystified. She couldn't refuse. Leave word for Nicky at the Wardwell, leave a note for him here... "All right, Mike, I'll be along at ten."

Mike thanked her and rang off. Catherine dressed quickly, walked to the corner and was lucky enough to get a cab at once. Driving north between ribbons of light on the pleasantly empty width of Sixth Avenue, she wondered frowningly what Mike wanted to see her about in such a hurry. Something to do with business, probably. He was the executor of her mother's tiny estate as well as of her Uncle John's big one.

Twenty-third Street, the theatre district, Columbus Circle, a blazing crescent off the park. Her thoughts returned unhappily to Nicky, and what he was doing, and where he could be. Was it her fault that he had had to resort to subterfuge to get away from her yesterday? Perhaps. Obsessed by the doctors, she might be trying to hold him on too tight a rein. You didn't always like what was best for you. Quite the contrary. This applied particularly to men. They were used to the driver's seat, resented a woman at the wheel. Yet in an emergency you had to take it. With convalescence, Nicky had become increasingly restless and unsettled. He had to have someone to lean on until he was completely well. The support might be irksome to him but without it he would fall to the ground.

MODERN MANNERS
There is no need to give a girl friend a gift when she announces her engagement; but if you choose to do so, it is perfectly correct.

HOW'D YOU MAKE OUT?
1—James G. Blaine.
2—Richard Wagner married Cosima, daughter of Franz Liszt, and wife of Hans von Bülow.
3—Sheep's intestines.
4—The oboe.
5—The trombone.

TODAY'S GRAB BAG

THE ANSWER, QUICK!

- 1—The daughter of what famous politician married the conductor and composer, Walter Damrosch?
- 2—What famous composer married the daughter of one of his best friends and the wife of another?
- 3—Most violin strings are made of catgut; what is catgut?
- 4—To what instrument do all the other players in an orchestra tune their instruments?
- 5—What brass wind instrument has been in use, practically unchanged, for six centuries?

YOUR FUTURE

This birthday of yours is an excellent time for all financial, speculative and social activities. It is a good time to take chances, and the evening can bring you many romantic thrills. There will be some annoyance through relatives or friends in your next year but gain is predicted, in some cases by inheritance. This period favors dealings in property and with older persons.

New York's snowstorm

NEW YORK—Looking back at it now, with a few days' perspective, the thing that you remember most about Manhattan's great snowstorm of December 26, 1947, is the way the city was humiliated. This is a proud and arrogant town, asking and giving no quarter, and its sudden defiance of catastrophe, wars, rains, tornadoes and famine is something to behold. But this time it was as if nature had fired a snowball with a rock in it, and had knocked off our silk hat. Our fierce dignity flew off with the topper. Suddenly, silently, New York was laid low, trapped and trussed, crippled and helpless. Our cockeyed, phony superiority was stripped from us and we were like any beleaguered, isolated village. We were snowbound.

Stranger of all was to see Broadway tied up in knots, deadened and lifeless. This is our happiest, loudest street, full of nervous vigor and excitement all ways. To see it suddenly gone blank and quiet is like watching some bellying, life-of-the-party extrovert drop dead while doing card tricks at a party. The contrast is so great, the silence so deafening, it's hard to believe. And yet it happened. The snow began around 5 o'clock on the morning of the 26th. On the mid-night following, I stood in the center of Broadway at 50th street and, looking first north and then south, could see no signs of mechanical life... only people, insignificant people, crawling through the drifts. Right there at Broadway and 50th a taxi lay abandoned in the exact center of the street, almost out of sight under the snow. A few people chattered and yelled to each other, but the streets soaked up the noise like sound-proofing. Broadway was a muffled drum—and the snow kept falling. You knew it never would stop. You knew that this was the way, grotesquely, the world would end... the snow mounting like rising flood waters, and everyone everywhere drowning in the white flakes.

Later that night I was among those present at the Riggs-Kramer tennis match in Madison Square Garden, and there was an unscheduled laugh when Promoter Jack Harris announced over the loudspeaker, with the pride of a pouter pigeon, that the event was a sellout. One weighed the two great news stories of the night—the snowstorm outside, and the startling fact that, inside, a couple of tennis players had managed to lure 15,000 citizens out of eight million into a big barn—and found one of them slightly wanting in importance.

The next morning, the snow had stopped, and I found nine vehicles stuck in the snow at a street corner near my apartment building, as if a child had flung away his toys disinterestedly. One of them was a Department of Sanitation snowplow that had given up the ghost the night before. It was as if nature had suddenly mused, "What is this I see before me—a snowplow?" and had raised her little finger to end its gyrations. The humiliation of the city was complete.

WITHOUT HISTORY

THE OLD saying, "A happy country has no history", applies equally well to happy families, which seldom if ever make newspaper headlines or even feature stories. Broken homes and their by-products are the stuff of which stories are made.

Recently, however, the Chicago Daily News has been running a series of illustrated feature stories concerning happy families in the Chicago area. This refreshing innovation pictures families consisting of from one to twelve children, and sometimes one or two grandparents. One example showed a young couple who had added the wife's mother to their menage with no accompanying disharmony. The mother, when interviewed, showed admiration and affection for her son-in-law, and the latter was appreciative of his mother-in-law's help around the house and of her co-operative attitude.

One attribute in common among the large families of children was a sense of responsibility and a protective attitude of older children toward the younger and smaller ones. On the whole, these happy families are united as groups, and held together by strong bonds of loyalty and affection. Most have church affiliations, and nearly all have so much fun at home together that harmful outside amusements have no drawing power.

These families, whose heads are often active in PTA work and in service clubs, are an active force for good in their home communities. They far outnumber the headline makers.

BRITONS MOVING

A DISPATCH from London says that 500,000 citizens of Great Britain are waiting for planes and ships to take them overseas. Canada, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, the East Indies, and the new colonies under development in East Africa are given as their destinations.

It takes courage to pick up stakes and start life anew in a strange country. Climate, social conditions, economic conditions, all challenge the old habits and customs. But apparently it takes more courage than many Britons have to stay put and suffer the monotony and drabness which have accompanied their daily living for the past few years. If the immediate future promised anything better, they might be able to bear it. But with more austerity the only prospect, any change looks like a good break.

These exiles will have a great deal to contribute to the colonies whose populations they will augment. Climatic and other differences will also work differences in the immigrants. The whole process will be interesting to observe.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

The Damon Runyon committee, which has been raising funds to fight cancer and has done it remarkably well, held a contest for a definition of Communism as part of its program. They must have received some extraordinarily interesting definitions, most of which are undoubtedly confused but give an index to American thinking on the subject.

The prize-winning reply is as follows: "A Communist is one who would like to divide everything, particularly these United States."

This may be facetious but it is wholly incorrect. The Communists do not wish to divide wealth; they seek to concentrate it. They do not believe in dividing up the United States; they do believe in taking over the whole United States and even the entire world, fitting all countries into their Soviet system and controlling all of mankind from a single world headquarters in Russia.

In a word, their concern is not with division or subtraction but solely with addition.

Under the capitalist system, wealth is individually held, more or less, according to earnings, savings, investment and inheritance. The individual's wealth may increase by profits or interest or rents, or it may decrease by losses. The means of production and distribution is privately held and operated. Fearful of monopolies, the government regulates these private holdings with the object of maintaining competition, avoiding concentration of wealth and power. The redistribution of wealth is further accomplished by inheritance and income taxes and, to some extent, by public spending.

Capitalism is then a system in which the results of productivity are divided, a great many individuals receiving a share either directly through wages, salaries, interest or indirectly through the distribution of the proceeds of taxes. When the division is slow, steps are taken to speed it up, the object being to avoid concentration.

Capitalist criticism of the New Deal was based, to no small degree, upon objections to its tendency to concentrate the ownership of wealth in the hands of the government through the RFC and some 50 government corporations, including such an agency as TVA. Whether such criticism was correct or not is not pertinent to this particular discussion; it is mentioned here to indicate that concentration of wealth by government is abhorrent to capitalism.

Under Communism, the government owns and operates the means of production and distribution. Although wages of a varying scale are paid, profits and losses can be earned only by the government. All productive and distributive agencies are government monopolies. In fact, Communism is a monopolistic system which tolerates no division of the fruits of production except as the state, which owns everything, temporarily permits to serve its own purposes.

That is why the Damon Runyon prizewinner, as so many others, is in error. Such persons have somehow gained the impression that Communists wish to divide up privately-owned wealth. They want no such thing. They wish to take away privately-owned wealth, to abolish it, to make it part of the state as a school or a park or a garbage incinerator is part of the state.

LAFF-A-DAY

DIET AND HEALTH

A Painful Baby Disorder

By HERMAN N. RUNDEN, M.D.

THE child who suffers from the condition known as intussusception becomes suddenly, seriously, and dramatically sick. Even though, as a rule, he is too young to describe his pain, his mother will notice that he never before in his life has cried so hard.

Intussusception usually develops in well-nourished and healthy babies between the ages of four and ten months. In this disorder there is a sort of telescoping of the bowel, which seems to take place most often when the child is being changed from a liquid to a solid diet. Thus, this may be one of the causes of the condition, though it may also develop as an apparent aftermath to a bowel infection.

Attacks of Pain

The symptoms of intussusception consist of attacks of colicky pain, vomiting, and the presence of blood in the bowel movements. About three-fourths of the children who develop intussusception usually have all of these symptoms, and all of those with the condition have at least one of them.

If, when these symptoms are present, a lump or mass can be felt in the abdomen, a diagnosis of intussusception is certain. Often, the lump may also be felt through the rectum.

Severe Symptoms

As I indicated earlier, even the first symptoms are severe enough to show that the child is seriously ill. The condition starts suddenly either with vomiting or an attack of sharp, colicky pain which may last only a few seconds but which returns at 10- to 30-minute intervals.

Between attacks, the baby may appear well, but when the pain comes on again he grows pale, draws up his legs, and cries violently. His pulse will be rapid and he may develop fever. As the condition progresses, and the blocking of the opening through the bowel is more complete, the child is pale, sweaty, and may often go into shock or collapse.

In making a diagnosis, it may be necessary to give the child an anesthetic or drug to put him to sleep. This will relax the muscles of the abdomen so that an examination may be carried out more easily.

If such a procedure is employed, preparations should be made so that, if necessary, an operation can be performed under the same anesthetic. X-ray of the bowel will almost always reveal the obstruction in the intestine. The treatment to relieve the condition is, in practically all instances, operation.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. A.: I seem to have a sensation of pins and needles in my legs. What could cause this trouble?

Answer: The condition you describe may be due to such things as disturbance of the circulation, trouble of the nervous system, or disorder of the lower part of the spine. Pressure, such as from a tumor within the lower part of the abdomen, may be responsible. Hence, a thorough study by a physician would have to be carried out before proper treatment could be suggested.

With his fracture, a blackout was always a possibility. When the phone finally rang at shortly after nine, she sprang for it. It wasn't Nicky; it was Mike Nye, and Mike wanted to see her.

"Can you come up here to my place, Catherine?" Mike asked. "I'd come to you only that I'm waiting for a long-distance call." "Now?" she said. "Oh, Mike, I can't. I'm expecting Nicky." "Nicky. . . ?" There was a pause at the other end of the wire. Then Mike said, "I've got to see you tonight, Catherine. Don't see me why, I'll tell you when you get here."

There was a note of urgency in his voice and it was sharper than usual. Catherine was mystified. She couldn't refuse. Leave word for Nicky at the Wardwell, leave a note for him here. . . . "All right, Mike. I'll be along at," she glanced at her watch, "around ten."

Mike thanked her and rang off. Catherine dressed quickly, walked to the corner and was lucky enough to get a cab at once. Driving north between ribbons of light on the pleasantly empty width of Sixth Avenue, she wondered frowningly what Mike wanted to see her about in such a hurry. Something to do with business, probably. He was the executor of her mother's tiny estate as well as of her Uncle John's big one.

Twenty-third Street, the theatre district, Columbus Circle, a blazing crescent of the park. Her thoughts returned unhappily to Nicky, and what he was doing, and where he could be. Was it her fault that he had had to resort to subterfuge to get away from her yesterday? Perhaps. Obsessed by the doctors, she might be trying to hold him on too tight a rein. You didn't always like what was best for you. Quite the contrary. This applied particularly to men. They were used to the driver's seat, resented a woman at the wheel. Yet in an emergency you had to take it. With convalescence, Nicky had become increasingly restless and unsettled. He had to have someone to lean on until he was completely well. The support might be irksome to him but without it he would fall to the ground.

New York's snowstorm

NEW YORK—Looking back at it now, with a few days' perspective, the thing that you remember most about Manhattan's great snowstorm of December 26, 1947, is the way the city was humiliated. This is a proud and arrogant town, asking and giving no quarter, and its sudden defiance of catastrophe, wars, rains, tornadoes and famine is something to behold. But this time it was as if nature had fired a snowball with a rock in it, and had knocked off our silk hat. Our fierce dignity flew off with the topper. Suddenly, silently, New York was laid low, trapped and trussed, crippled and helpless. Our cockeyed, phony superiority was stripped from us and we were like any beleaguered, isolated village. We were snowbound.

Strangest of all was to see Broadway tied up in knots, deadened and lifeless. This is our bawdiest, lustiest street, full of nervous vigor and excitement always. To see it suddenly gone blank and quiet is like watching some belting, life-of-the-party extrovert drop dead while doing card tricks at a party. The contrast is so great, the silence so deafening, it's hard to believe. And yet it happened. The snow began around 5 o'clock on the morning of the 26th. On the night following, I stood in the center of Broadway at 50th street, and looking first north and then south, could see no signs of mechanical life. . . . only people, insignificant people, crawling through the drifts. Right there at Broadway and 50th a taxi lay abandoned in the exact center of the street, almost out of sight under the snow. A few people chattered and yelled to each other, but the streets soaked up the noise like sound-proofing. Broadway was a muffled drum—and the snow kept falling. You knew it never would stop. You knew that this was the way, grotesquely, the world would end. . . . the snow mounting like rising flood waters, and everyone everywhere drowning in the white flakes.

Doctor Tells Why He Likes Trade

Specialists Seen On Decline Now

By ARCHER SUDAN, M. D.
American Medical Association's "Family Doctor of 1947."

CLEVELAND, Jan. 8.—In my opinion there never was and there never will be any substitute for the close personal relationship between the doctor and his patient. That personal contact, the faith that a patient has in his doctor, is one of the biggest assets a doctor can have in helping his patient and curing him of his disease.

From the very nature of things, a family doctor, who is a general practitioner, can establish that kind of relationship better than can any specialist.

This does not mean that specialists are any less important. But a specialist, dealing with only one special part of human anatomy, or with only one disease, or small group of diseases, is not going to see any individual patient often enough to establish the kind of close personal contact I have in mind. Originally all doctors were general practitioners and all of them were family doctors to their patients. Then the science of medicine grew and grew, until it became impossible for any one doctor, even in a whole lifetime of study, to encompass the entire field of general practice and at the same time to perfect himself in specialized skills for every known specialty.

THIS IS becoming more so every day, because the science of medicine is still growing and expanding.

But, you see, if we had only the specialists, a patient might have to see a dozen different doctors every time he felt ill. Most people cannot afford that expense, for one thing, and for another more important thing, no patient would then develop the personal confidence in just one good doctor.

After all, the good general practitioner can take care of a majority of illnesses and accidents.

The good general practitioner is going to call in a specialist to help him whenever a specialist's services are for the best interests of the patient, and the general practitioner is the one who knows exactly what specialist to call.

There are trends in medicine, just as in every other profession or endeavor, and sometimes trends, like a pendulum, swing too far to one side or the other and have to be brought back into balance.

For awhile, the trend was all toward specialization. But that trend is now, happily, in my opinion, reversing itself somewhat. The general practitioner is more recognized now than he was five or ten years ago, for his value to the whole field of medicine.

As I have indicated, the science of medicine always grows. The modern doctor is trained to use many drugs, instruments, and kinds of equipment that cannot well be used in the home with safety to his patient.

SO THE DOCTOR needs a hospital. Communities in my part of the country are not looking to the federal or state governments to give them free hospitals. They are raising the necessary funds locally, and are building small community hospitals. That is the way it should be.

If the doctor is to practice the high quality of medicine that he is trained to practice and wants to practice, it is surely a full-time job. In other words, the practicing physician cannot give half his time to the operation of a little hospital. The community should do that much for him. It is very gratifying to see that this is the current trend.

I have been asked why I devoted more than 20 years to serving the little community of Kremmling, Colo. The answer is found in the doctor's side of that personal relationship I have described.

A doctor very soon begins to think of his patients as friends and of course they are his friends.

Before long he thinks of them almost as members of a big family of his, because it is almost a family-like relationship.

It is probably hard for anyone except a family doctor to understand how stimulating that is to thousands and thousands of physicians. To me, it is more stimulating even than scientific research, which is another close interest of mine.

DAYTON, Jan. 8.—Gasoline rationing for all ground vehicles was instituted at the Air Forces' Wright and Patterson fields today for the first time in history.

Thad's Feet Hurt

After a long, hard day's work on the farm, Thad's idea of how to spend an evening is to take off his shoes, and relax with a mellow glass of beer.

But his missus has other ideas. After being in the house all day, she's all for walking to the village, if it's only for a soda. Likes to see people, catch the latest gossip. But Thad says, no, his feet hurt! Begon to cause unpleasantness in Thad's home.

Then Bill Webster comes up with an idea. If Thad takes the missus to Andy's Garden Tavern. Thad can relax with his glass of beer, and the missus can also chat with all the neighbors there. Each gets his (or her) own way.

Worked, too! In fact, now the missus likes an occasional temperate glass of beer herself. And Thad finds it's pleasanter to enjoy his beer with good companions, rather than alone. In fact, his feet stopped hurting too!

INTENT OR COINCIDENCE

Truman's Talk Labeled Stab At Wallace Party

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—Whether it was included by intent or coincidence is for the politicians to say—but President Truman's "State of the Union" message to congress yesterday definitely contained an answer to Henry Wallace and his third party threat.

Intentional or accidental, it constituted a definite bid for the return of the three distinct types of voters whom observers have termed most likely to follow Wallace out of the Democratic party.

They are: (1) extreme liberals, (2) midwest farmers, and (3) labor unions—and it is worthy of note that the President's implied invitation came at a time when several of the groups already had bolted the Wallace cause.

For the first group, the President proposed one of the most extremely liberal (as the word has come to be used) legislative programs to be suggested on Capitol Hill since the late Franklin D. Roosevelt last addressed a joint session of congress.

SHOTGUNNED out in pellet form, these proposals included: 1—Civil rights legislation to eliminate racial and religious discrimination at the polls, schools and employment offices.

2—Advanced social security legislation, involving unemployment, old age and death benefits, and some form of semi-socialized medical care.

3—Vastly increased federal aid to education.

4—Establishment of an executive department to administer such health, education and security laws.

5—Federal development of additional power projects such as the Tennessee Valley Authority.

6—A horizontal cost-of-living income tax credit, which chiefly would benefit low-income groups—and which, incidentally, even the late FDR never proposed!

Shifting from such liberal-wooling social legislation tactics, the President's message moved over to proposed measures involving farmers—many of whom still remember the welcome checks they received under Wallace's administration of the agriculture department in the thirties.

Pointing out that, despite gains, the average farm income still is far less than the average city income, with living standards thus proportionately lower, the President said this "inequality" must be eliminated.

To accomplish that, he proposed modernization and improvement of the price control program; extension of crop insurance benefits; federal encouragement of farm cooperatives; extension of the school lunch program; expansion of rural electrification, and increased government support of soil conservation.

Without being flip, it can be safely said that such a program—if carried out—certainly would go far toward wooing away any last lingering love for Henry Wallace which might still thrive in some farm districts!

THE LABOR legislation suggestions were more brief, perhaps due to the existence of the recently-passed Taft-Hartley bill, but certainly they were not less dramatic.

The President's flat recommendation that labor's minimum wage be raised from 40 to 75 cents an hour is something which is likely to make any union pause before throwing its weight behind Wallace in the fall.

His other labor proposals more or less repeated his previous stands, including his opposition to the Taft-Hartley bill—but large segments of labor already had shown a disinclination to follow Wallace down a third-party pathway, so Truman had less to fear from that group.

There, generally, was the President's answer to the Wallace threat in his Wednesday message to congress.

It followed—exactly in outline, and closely in considerable detail—the prediction of this correspondent just a week ago. At that time, even many members of the house and senate were skeptical that the President would reply to Wallace in that way.

One Republican said it would have little campaign effect if he did, since obviously a GOP-dominated congress "would balk at such a program—and the voters would be smart enough to know he was bluffing."

A Democrat doubted that Truman would try such a tack, but added thoughtfully that "if he does, instead of losing votes to Wallace in the midwest, he might even pick up some from the Republicans!"

The heavy personal cost of being victimized by Communism was experienced by former King Michael in Switzerland today as he added up his fortune and found it sadly depleted indeed.

Spokesmen for the exiled Romanian monarch disclosed that the Communist authorities allowed him to take out of the country only a comparatively few personal belongings, including one of his many automobiles.

They told of the utmost amazement on the part of Swiss customs guards—who are entirely accustomed to fabulous wealth in transit—when they failed to find a board Michael's special train a truly royal ransom in gold, silver and jewels.

Of course, he receives comparative freedom and extremely attractive young princesses.

ROMANIA is regarded as a poor country. Yet its rulers, the house of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, never were satisfied with anything less than the expensive best.

This family trait was emphasized by Frederick the Great of Prussia, who built Potsdam and its myriad palaces around the fantastically beautiful Sans Souci.

The later Hohenzollerns were no less lavish. They strewed Germany with palaces, hunting lodges, vast personal parks and private preserves.

Bucharest, mainly because of its rich crown property, came to be known as the "Paris of the East."

The Winter palace of Cotroceni is a European treasure trove and Sinaia in the lush countryside might have crystallized from a fairy tale.

In real estate alone—to say nothing of priceless Goyas and other paintings and the crown jewels—Michael's possessions at home probably were worth a re-sounding $50 million.

THERE ALSO was the small matter of a $50 thousand town house in London's swank Cadogan Square, which doubtless now reverts to the Communist government, plus Michael's glistening private airplane, a fleet of automobiles all colors of the rainbow and probably a luxurious yacht or two.

Whether for love or political expediency, Michael has sacrificed a kingly treasure of which there are precious few left in this harsh and rigid world.

The state of Tennessee is rich in minerals, its livestock and agricultural interests are varied and important, its lumber production is large, its commercial interests are assisted by reason of its navigable waters, especially the Mississippi river.

The earliest type of boat is thought to have been the raft, made from grass, logs of wood, bundles of reeds or other light materials, tied together.

Blackwell Signs New Reds Pact

CINCINNATI, Jan. 8—Warren Giles, Cincinnati Redleg prey, could consider his battle to sign his 1948 ball club half won today.

Ewell Blackwell, biggest wheel of the Reds, came into the fold yesterday, returning his signed contract with the notation that he was "very happy" with his salary terms.

Giles did not divulge the contract arrangements, but observers guessed that the 26-year-old pitcher's stipend would go "well into five figures," probably around $25,000.

Louis Slow In Signing For Bout

Strauss Lacking Go-Ahead Data

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—Sol Strauss, the lawyer who turned stand-in fight promoter, has everything all set for Joe Louis' defense of the heavyweight championship next June.

All Strauss needs is the titleholder's signature on a contract, the challenger's signature on a similar document and a place to hold the bout.

The champion himself has indicated that he would prefer to continue doing business with the 20th Century Sporting Club now headed pro tem by Strauss, but in recent years there have been so many changes in Louis' stable that nothing is certain.

In the old days he had a pair of managers who ran his business in keeping with the best traditions of prizefighting. Then they were moved out and Mike Jacobs took command.

HOWEVER, Jacobs' illness has moved him out of the picture and the champion seems inclined to shop around a little, especially with Philadelphia seeking the June defense for its mammoth municipal stadium.

Louis probably will sign with the 20th Century, but at last reports hadn't done so.

Walcott offers another problem. He has a manager and a sort of assistant manager, the latter holding promotional rights on the challenger.

They have been demanding 30 percent for an encore with the champion, who wants 40 percent, making a total of 70 percent for the main event, if Strauss holds still for such almost unprecedented financial arrangements.

Beyond all that, the Yankee stadium has not been formally and officially obtained for the match.

But fans needn't lose any sleep over the chances of the match falling through. Strauss will lose enough sleep trying to put it on to take care of the insomnia department for everybody.

Then finally on a June night, Louis will meet his foe in the stadium or some place and will announce again no doubt that one more defense will be his last.

OU Joins Cincy At Top Of Big Ohio Cage Loop

By International News Service
Ohio university joined Cincinnati atop the Mid-American Conference standings today following a 63-to-41 trouncing of Miami in last night's league opener.

The Bearcats of Cincinnati won their first conference tilt from Western Reserve Tuesday.

Dutch Trautwein's Ohio university cagers, defeated only by Bowling Green in five games, had a hot night against Miami. Led by Dick Shrider and Bob Johnson, the Bobcats made 45 percent of their shots.

Shrider had 19 points, while Johnson hooped 16 and stopped Miami's high scoring Bob Brown with a meager seven.

IN OTHER Buckeye games, Xavier rang up its ninth victory in 11 games, drubbing Louisville, 62 to 34; Akron's eighth win in nine starts was a 66-to-55 decision over Youngstown; Canterbury defeated Defiance, 57 to 55, and Muskingum piled up a 75-to-54 score on W. and J.

The Ohio conference takes over the spotlight tonight with Ohio Northern playing at Ashland and Kenyon at Denison. In other games, Heidelberg plays host to Assumption and Rio Grande travels to Steubenville.

Buffalo Iceman Cools Garner
AKRON, Jan. 8—Henry Blake, 20-year-old Buffalo iceman-pugilist, boasted today a streak of 39 consecutive wins and 33 knockouts following his TKO of Bob Garner at the armory here last night.

Garner, who had been saved twice by the bell, went down for the fourth time following a barrage of hooks and his handlers threw in the towel in the fifth round of a scheduled eight-round.

Promoter Bob Heath said negotiations will be started to sign Blake with Pat Comiskey for an Akron bout soon.

The Ohio conference takes over the spotlight tonight with Ohio Northern playing at Ashland and Kenyon at Denison. In other games, Heidelberg plays host to Assumption and Rio Grande travels to Steubenville.

Buffalo Iceman Cools Garner

AKRON, Jan. 8.—Henry Blake, 20-year-old Buffalo iceman-pugilist, boasted today a streak of 39 consecutive wins and 33 knockouts following his TKO of Bob Garner at the armory here last night.

Garner, who had been saved twice by the bell, went down for the fourth time following a barrage of hooks and his handlers threw in the towel in the fifth round of a scheduled eight-rounder.

Promoter Bob Heath said negotiations will be started to sign Blake with Pat Comiskey for an Akron bout soon.

Few Changes Expected In Football Rules

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The attitude of the nation's gridiron coaches toward the prevailing football rules today is "let well enough alone."

As a result, only two minor changes will be recommended for final action to the National Collegiate Athletic Association rules committee which meets next Tuesday at Savannah, Ga.

The two proposals, made by the 25-man group headed by Lou Little of Columbia, are:

1. That the rule on two successive kickoffs going out of bounds be amended so that the receiving team will take possession on their own "restraining" line instead of the kickers' 40-yard line.

2. When a player is injured after the fourth time out in a half, only the injured player can be substituted for without penalty.

These were the fewest number of changes to gain the approval of the coaches since before the war. Little explained:

"WE FELT the game was in such good balance that there was no immediate need for any more major changes."

Rejected were such controversial proposals as eliminating the extra point after touchdown; allowing both teams to advance with a fumble; allowing a runner to get up and continue after falling; abolishing the free substitution rule and permitting T-formation quarterbacks to receive passes when standing less than a yard behind the scrimmage line.

Legion Quintet Blasted 65-49 By Greenfield

The Cincinnati American Legion basketball team played the Greenfield Independents in Greenfield Armory Wednesday night and lost, 65-49.

Greenfield's center, Newell, six-foot-two eagle eye, paced the Greenfield crew by collecting 30 points. He controlled rebounds and the locals were unable to stop the big man.

The Legion was seven points behind at the end of the third period, but lost out when the Greenfielders hit the hoop for 22 points in the last frame.

High scorer for Cincinnati was Leon Sims, with 19 points.

With three out of five games won so far, the Legion will play a return game with the Columbus Veteran's Administration team on the Roll-n-Bowl floor at 8 p. m. Thursday.

College Boys Still Fair Game

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—College ballplayers will continue to be fair game for marauding major league teams in spite of a request by the colleges that the boys be permitted to graduate first.

National League President Ford Frick told the college coaches at their annual dinner last night:

"We are in business to make money and we need all the talent that we can get. Too, such a rule (prohibiting the signing of players before graduation) would be unfair to the boys."

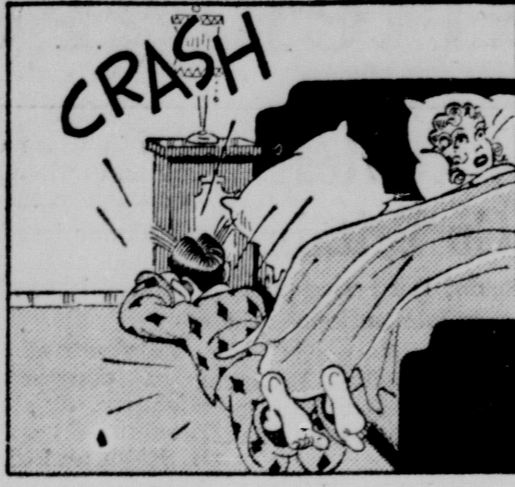

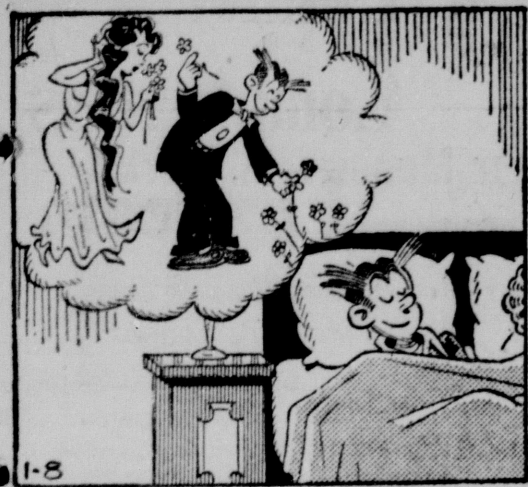

"The average age of a college grad is 22. Most would require at least two years minor league experience. So a boy would be 24 before he began to earn a big league salary."

"Most players are through at 32. Therefore, that would make a career only eight years long."

USED AGAINST YOU
"WHATEVER you say may be used against you." That is an admonition given by most fair-minded judges and prosecuting attorneys to defendants in criminal court cases. But there is no friendly judge or attorney around to give you that same advice during the bidding of a bridge hand. It is up to you to be your own savior and impose the gag on your bidding which otherwise will help your opponents to beat your brains out.

North and South, using artificial club bids to show at least three top tricks and the 1-Diamond response to deny possession of two aces or an ace-king, noted the opponents' efforts to interrupt them with spade bids. The obstructiveness succeeded to the point where North and South had dropped the bidding at 3-No Trumps, as you will note above. Then East woke them up with his intended sacrifice of 4-Spades. That showed such suit-length and also high-card weakness that South jumped back into action with his 5-Clubs, now knowing about North's certainty of no more than one spade, since he had three himself and could now count the opponents as having probably nine or ten. When North then went to 5-No Trumps, South knew that singleton must be the A, and that North must have been as close to a positive response as possible instead of the 1-Diamond he had answered. In the play, following the spade 5 lead, South took all the tricks except one when he sent the heart 9 through to the J. The players of this deal are not named, for fear that somebody might endanger his life by asking East why he didn't pass the 3-No Trumps instead of bidding 4-Spades.

Circleville's First Kindergarten To Open Jan. 19

46 Signed For Kiddie School

Group About Ready For Opening Date

Forty-six youngsters have been registered for attendance at Circleville's first kindergarten, scheduled to open Jan. 19 in First Methodist church.

Originally, only 40 children were to be accepted for the pre-school training, but the half-dozen represented unexpected parent demands.

Officials of Circleville Kindergarten Association, sponsor of the school, reported Thursday nearly everything was in readiness for opening day.

A few pieces of minor equipment are required. Mrs. Elliott Barnhill, chairman of the equipment committee, said the organization still needs a doll house, child's table, two dolls and doll clothes, toy telephone, toy brooms, brushes, dust mops, toy trucks and some large-sized washable rugs.

MISS MARJORIE Bowman, who received a degree in kindergarten work at Ohio university, Athens, has been secured as instructor.

Morning classes are scheduled to run from 9 to 11:30 a. m. while afternoon sessions are booked for 1 to 3:30. Students will be divided among two groups.

$2 weekly fee will be charged, according to Mrs. Ray W. Davis, president of the Association.

Mrs. Davis has appointed a committee composed of Mrs. Leonard Williams, Mrs. Emmett Wood and Mrs. James L. Yost to take care of the lighting system in the rooms which the kindergarten will use in the church.

Chinese Oust Famed General

NANKING, Jan. 8.—Feng Yuh-Siang, China's famed "Christian general" who has repeatedly criticized Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek during his present stay in the United States, was expelled today from the Kuomintang.

weeks in those countries getting firsthand information on existing conditions in the British Empire.

A dinner has been planned for 200 local and out-of-town Rotary club members who have registered.

Members of the January program committee are Robert Brehmer, Jr., chairman, Frank Barnhill, Fred Watts, Carleton D. Smith and Clarence Barnhart.

never be accurately measured, but we all know it has done a tremendous job of helping people with their hospital expenses, through low cost and prepayment. We of the Circleville Junior Chamber of Commerce are proud to again be associated with the Blue Cross movement in sponsoring the Pickaway community enrollment", Ed Amey, president of the local Jaycees, declared.

The 10-hour work day for federal employees was established by congress in 1840.

Rotary To Hear Talk On Britain

Frank Spain, third vice-president of Rotary International, will give his "British Report" to members of Circleville Rotary club when it meets at 6:30 p. m. Friday in First Methodist church.

His talk will be based on observations during a recent tour of Rotary clubs in Britain and Ireland. Spain spent several weeks in those countries getting firsthand information on existing conditions in the British Empire.

A dinner has been planned for 200 local and out-of-town Rotary club members who have registered.

Members of the January program committee are Robert Brehmer, Jr., chairman, Frank Barnhill, Fred Watts, Carleton D. Smith and Clarence Barnhart.

To date Theodore Roosevelt is the youngest person to become President of the United States.
